

Live Cheap and Free Glossary Page

Term	Definition
Catalina	A coupon that prints out from the cash register after a transaction has been completed.
Double Coupon	Coupon issued by a store that matches the value of a coupon up to a certain amount. For example, a double coupon from Safeway matches up to $.50 of the value of a coupon.
“Food Day”	Oregon’s Tuesday ads delivered to homes free of charge.
Internet Printable	A coupon printed at home from an internet source.
MC	Manufacturer Coupon, stated by the expiration date at the top of the coupon. Issued from the company that makes the product.
OOP	Out of Pocket – how much money actually spent on a transaction after coupons, rebates and gift cards.
OYNO	On Your Next Order (Purchase)
Raincheck	A form from a store when a product is out of stock. Allows customer to buy the product when it comes in at the sale or coupon price.
Rebate	Money issued to the consumer after conditions of a rebate have been met, usually by submission of a form, receipt and UPC symbol.

Live Cheap and Free Glossary Page

RR	Register Rewards are catalinas issued by Walgreen's after purchase of specific products. They are like cash for use at Walgreen's.
SC	Store Coupon, issued by a store usually through a Sunday or Tuesday ad and only accepted at that store.
Scenario	A plan to buy certain items using discounts, store and manufacturer coupons, and rebates in order to get the lowest price.
SCR	Single Check Rebate – a program operated by Rite Aid. Submit receipts each month for specified items (online or through the mail) and request the rebate at the end of the period. Rebate can only be processed once each period.
Stack	The strategy of combining store specials, store coupons and manufacturer coupons for maximum savings on products.
Transaction	Where money is exchanged for products.
UPC	Symbol found on products, usually in barcode form.
YMMV	An abbreviation for “Your Mileage May Vary,” which refers to the possibility that the possible deal might not work out the same for one person as another.